In this workshop, SIT students investigated on the area around Toyosu Park, and based on the analysis, propose a library and MICE functions together with the graduate students in Aalto University, Finland.

This project not only focused on the architectural design, but also on the open public spaces, namely parks and spaces in-between buildings.

The students from two university worked in small groups for the research, and made proposals individually. Working on the same project on the same site, the students from two schools helped on the research as well as gave advises on each other's design. There were online joint mid and final reviews, in which three instructors from each university made comments and advises.
